We are able to take giant steps forward due to the many years of leadership decision-making experience of our Executive Board Leaders. A retiree group has a big advantage! Our basic leadership decision-making process is "1-2-3-Go!" 1. Plan, 2. Organize, 3. Check, and Go! ...Action 3. Check is a continuous improvement process.

SUNSHINE

It has been awhile with any news to report...between computer glitches, working and vacations, times does get away with one!

I can only report what I hear, and that is from our members and those who read the monthly news. Remember, you can reach me by e-mail, and my phone number is in our directory.

This is old news, but out of respect to some of our deceased members and families, it could be followed up with our note of Sincere Condolences to the surviving family.

Elmer Kulm passed on earlier in the year at the age of 82. We are sure he was well remembered as the Chauffeur for at least 6 of the company CEO's. He was hired in 1956 right into the Sunnyvale facility. Elmer suffered severe complications from his diabetes the last 2 years of his life. He is survived by his wife, Fran Kulm, children, grand children and great- grand children. Fran herself, has had major health problems and we are sending her our "Sunshine" thoughts and hopes for some comfortable months ahead for her.

Joy Meadows passed away in the spring time of this year. She is survived by her sons, Mervyn Meadows of San Jose, and Mike Meadows of Grass Valley. Joy suffered complications from her long, long battle with diabetes. Both Joy and her husband Ben (passed on 2 years prior to Joy) were very active in many of the company LERA activities.

Sheryl Meinzinger (Shorty) is recovering from surgery....so we wish her a speedy recovery and "Sunshine" days ahead. Rex Meinzinger passed away a few months back at a very young age from complications while having knee surgery.

Now that summer is gone and we are officially into the fall season, we can get ready for the holidays, a nice warm fire and slow down the fast pace of gardens, vacations and staying cool!!

Have a safe, healthy and happy month!

MEMBER LETTERS

LMMAR,

Thanks for informing me that I am the winner of your drawing for Sep 2007. It's been a long time since I have won anything, so I received your notice with great surprise and jubilation.

My wife Dee of 50 years marriage, recently passed away from multiple myeloma cancer. Dee was involved with The Country Woman's Club of Campbell endowment fund, which raised money to grant scholarships to deserving high school graduates in the Santa Clara valley.

I will donate this wonderful prize to the CWCC endowment.

Thanks,
Frank Clarke

Dear Norm,

What a wonderful surprise to receive the $50 monthly drawing check. It came just in time to be used on my trip to El Salvador, Guatemala, Honduras and Belize. I'm sure there will be some tempting hand crafted item(s) wanting to come home in my suitcase!

Folsom has been my home since 2002. Like so many I followed my daughters to the area. The heat has taken some getting use to but we all managed to run from one air conditioned area to another.

Another surprise occurred recently when I ran into Vic Victorino at the Folsom History Museum. We are both volunteers.

I'd love to attend one of your luncheons, but they always seem to take place when I'm traveling. Management Association has always been dear to my heart. Keep up the good work with LMMAR The newsletter format is great.

Yours Truly,
Carol Des Voigne

Lockheed Martin Achieves Key Integration Milestone On First-Of-Its-Kind Missile Warning Satellite

SUNNYVALE, Calif, September 10th, 2007 – Lockheed Martin [NYSE: LMT] announced today that it has successfully mated the spacecraft bus and the payload for the first Space-Based Infrared System (SBIRS) geosynchronous orbit (GEO-1) satellite.

SBIRS will provide early warning of ballistic missile launches and support other missions simultaneously, including missile defense, technical intelligence and battlespace awareness.

The GEO-1 bus is the structural foundation of the satellite and includes an integrated propulsion system as well as other critical subsystems for communications, attitude control, thermal control, command and data handling.

The GEO payloads feature a scanning sensor that will provide for short revisit times over its full field of view and a staring sensor that can be tasked for step-stare or dedicated stare operations over smaller areas. The GEO scanner and other payload components such as the focal plane assembly, and processing algorithms are identical to those used on SBIRS highly elliptical orbit (HEO) payloads, the first of which has completed initial on-orbit deployment and checkout and demonstrated that its performance meets or exceeds specifications.

"The integration of this technically complex hardware is a major milestone for the team that moves this critical national security program another step closer to delivering unprecedented new capabilities for the warfighter," said Mark Crowley, Lockheed Martin's SBIRS vice president. "We are on track to sustain our momentum in the remaining integration and test work ahead and look forward to the ultimate deployment of this first-of-its-kind satellite."

The successful mate of the payload and spacecraft allows the team of Lockheed Martin Space Systems, Sunnyvale, Calif., the SBIRS prime contractor, and Northrop Grumman Electronic Systems, Azusa, Calif. , the payload subcontractor, to begin system level environmental and acceptance testing in preparation for launch in 2009.

Lockheed Martin is currently under contract to provide two HEO payloads and two GEO satellites, as well as the ground-based assets to receive and process the infrared data to its customer, the SBIRS Wing, located at the Space and Missile Systems Center, Los Angeles Air Force Base, Calif. Air Force Space Command operates the SBIRS system.
